

Statement of: William West Seegmiller
Candidate for: City Councilmember
City of West Hollywood

My name is William West Seegmiller. I'm 38 years old and moved to West Hollywood eight years ago, driven by a pursuit of freedom and justice. Coming from a loving family that instilled in me values of faith and integrity, I began my activism as a teenager, working outside partisan divides to build broad coalitions for peace. My journey has led me to roles as a human trafficking survivor advocate, HIV/AIDS researcher, and currently, the supervising producer of a nightly radio news program.

Over the last four years, West Hollywood has faced deep divisions and the lasting impacts of pandemic lockdowns. We've witnessed the closure of cherished local businesses, schools, and places of worship, along with a troubling erosion of public safety and increased visible distress on our streets. These developments have left many questioning the direction of our town.

I bring 15 years of commitment to bridging political divides, advocating for human trafficking survivors, pushing for legislative reforms, and cultivating grassroots movements to restore dignity and safety for all. A pivotal moment in my advocacy was my involvement in the Ed Buck case. Exposing Buck's heinous crimes highlighted the urgent need for reform. Collaborating with activists, we played a crucial role in holding Buck accountable and revealing systemic failures. This battle against corruption solidified my belief in the necessity of independent voices in local governance—voices unbound by partisan constraints.

The COVID-19 pandemic further exposed issues such as increased surveillance, censorship, and medical segregation. As the founder of the Free WeHo Coalition, I led efforts to challenge these encroachments on our rights. We fought for medical freedom and the right to make informed health decisions, emphasizing the need to uphold constitutional liberties even during crises.

Producing a nightly radio news program that links global political agendas to local impacts has sharpened my focus on the practical aspects of local governance. I'm committed to ending political hostility and fostering a culture of respect for diverse opinions, not just diversity of identity.

Running as an independent candidate, I offer a fresh perspective free from partisan constraints. My campaign is dedicated to confronting corruption, protecting freedoms, and ensuring integrity in our local government. Together, we can build a West Hollywood that exemplifies ethical leadership and ensures liberty and justice for all.
